Airhead!

The diary of an incompetent air-con apprentice...

MONDAY

This is ridiculous! Max has got us spying on holiday villas, to see if clients are over-using the air-con and racking-up unnecessary bills. Last week I was chased out of a villa by a couple who thought I was a voyeur... Today I was pinned to the floor by a security guard for loitering suspiciously... What kind of career is this? I mean, I didn't spend 3 years at college studying The History of Film Studies just to waste my time...

TUESDAY

Been doing some research. Penguin have an energy-saving solution for holiday properties – a remote control that only learns specific temperature commands, to prevent clients running the air-con at extremes. They call it their 'Energy Controller'. Neat idea – and we're gonna copy it! I told Max and he was dead chuffed: "Well done, son! I'll get in touch with Wang, our Chinese supplier. They'll have something similar but cheap-as-chips which we can flog for loadsamoney... We'll out-compete those smart-arses at Penguin!"

WEDNESDAY

Max played golf all morning, then 'networked' (i.e. boozed) with his golf-bore pals all afternoon... Can't they talk about anything else? Such an obsession over a little white ball can't be healthy, can it? I mean, we had our Golden Retriever put down after he developed Obsessive Compulsive Disorder over a golf ball...

Still, thought I'd show some initiative and spent the day sorting an order for 5000

Wang remotes. They're only a euro each – we'll make a fortune! Big bonus for me!

THURSDAY

Haven't told Max about the order yet. I'll wait for confirmation that the money's gone through. I want it to be a surprise.

FRIDAY

"You did wha-aaat?", Max choked when I showed him the Wang receipt.
"Well, I thought -"
"No! I don't pay you to think, son! I s'pose it never occurred to you to order a sample first?"
"Er, no – why?"
"To test it, you plonker!"
"But what could go wrong?"
